Model General Assembly

The Model General Assembly was held April 2, 3 and 4 at the State Capitol, Richmond. Those attending from the Senior Tri-Hi-Y Club were Senator Ann Cunningham, Delegate Frances Sanders, Page in the Senate Eleanor Richardson; Reporter Peggy Godsey, and Club Sponsor, Mrs. Wiley Morris.

The Youth Legislators were aided in the Senate by the Hon. Edward E. Willey, of Richmond, and in the House of Delegates by Hon. Charles E. Green, Jr., of Bedford.

Several controversial bills were proposed in both houses. These bills produced heated debate on the floor. The Youth Governor, Clifford Atkinson, Jr., of Richmond, vetoed several bills that were presented to him.

The Youth Governor gave a very sincere address to the joint session on Thursday night.

The most outstanding and exciting part of the Assembly was the press conference, which the reporters had with the Governor of Virginia, J. Lindsay Almond. Governor Almond is a "typical Southern Gentleman," and is a very witty person. He said that his most satisfying experience in public service was his 13 years as a judge. He also said that the young people of today are better than ever before, because of education.

The Youth Governor for the 1960 Model General Assembly is Douglas Arthur, of Strasburg.

I am very grateful for the opportunity I had to attend Model General Assembly. It is truly an experience I shall never forget.

Traffic Statistics For The First Quarter Given

Richmond, April 15.- An unprecedented upswing in pedestrian deaths for the first three months of 1959 prevented a substantial reduction in overall traffic deaths in Virginia during the period according to a report from Colonel C. W. Woodson, Jr., chairman of the Governor's Highway Safety Committee and State Police Superintendent.

Colonel Woodson listed 179 total deaths for the 1959 period as against 181 for the first quarter of 1958. Pedestrian deaths, however, rose from 31 to 46. At the same time, he cautioned that the old specters of late reports and deaths from injuries received earlier were almost certain to push the 1959 toll beyond that of 1958. In the latter case, he said, the death of a person subsequent to a crash reverts to the date of injury for statistical purposes.

"In view of the fact that the first quarter of the year invariably sees less traffic deaths than any other quarter, this trend is more disturbing than is bare difference of 14 deaths indicates. There is simply no explanation for it, although traffic volumes showed about a 2 per cent increase," he said.

He stated further that, while the public is prone to blame drivers for such tragedies, studies of crashes show strongly that the pedestrian for more often than not is committing an illegal or inherently dangerous act when struck. Studies also indicate that about 9 out of 10 pedestrians killed are not licensed drivers, indicating a lack of knowledge as to the dangerous potentialities of an automobile and the limitations on the driver.

"We cannot condone any reckless driving that leads to these tragedies, but the walker should always remember that, from the standpoint of death or injury, the pedestrian always runs a poor second when disputing right of way with an automobile, no matter who is in the wrong," he continued.

In conclusion, Colonel Woodson cited Virginia statistics for 1958, which showed that each of the 2,357 pedestrians struck during the year was listed as "injured" or "killed," whereas many people involved in automobile - with automobile collisions escape unhurt.

NEW BOOK COMING OUT ON GEN. PENDLETON

On April 25, The University of North Carolina Press will publish 'Stonewall's Man: Sandie Pendleton,' by Dr. W. G .Bean, who was recently appointed by Governor Almond as a member of the Virginia Civil War Commission. Dr. Bean is the Douglas Southall Freeman Professor of History in Washington and Lee University and has served as chairman of that department since 1930.

Dr . Bean reports that he first became interested in the career of Sandie Pendleton, Adjutant General and Chief of Staff of the famed Second Corps of the Army of Northern Virginia, after reading "I Rode With Stonewall," by Henry Kyd Douglas, published by The University of North Carolina Press in 1940. "This interest," Dr. Bean continues, "was further stimulated by suggestions by Douglas Southall Freeman on two occasions, in his 'Lee's Lieutenants,' that Sandie merited a memoir. "

Alexadrer Swift Pendleton, familiarly known as "Sandie," son of Dr. William Nelson Pendleton and Anzolette (Page) Pendleton, was born near Alexandria, Virginia, in 1840. In 1853 his family moved to Lexington when his father assumed the rectorship of Grace Episcopal Church. Thirteen-year-old Sandie was enrolled as a freshman at Washington College and four years later graduated at the head of his class. In the fall of 1859, Sandie entered the University of Virginia for graduate study and maintained there his brilliant reputation. When war came in the spring of 1861, he accepted an appointment as 2nd lieutenant in the Provincial Army of Virginia.

Immediately after reporting at Harper's Ferry in early June, he was asked by General Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson to join his staff. Recognized as a brilliant staff officer—even as "Stonewall's Man," he contributed much to the success and efficiency of the Second Corps. He became, at the age of 22, Jackson's chief of staff, and the only young officer Jackson called by his first name. Another member of Jackson's staff, Henry Kyd Douglas, called Sandie "the ablest of them all."

Screwworm Eradication Program Shows Progress

Excellent progress is being made in eradicating the screwworm, a serious pest of livestock in the southeastern states.

Dr. J. O. Rowell, entomologist at VPI, passes along this news from officials of the Animal Disease Eradication Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture. But Dr. Rowell says there is always the possibility of reinfestation, and he alerts farmers and professional agriculture workers to the necessity of reporting any suspected cases.

Complacency now on the part of the livestock industry or others involved in the eradication program could result in serious setbacks at a time when complete victory seems to be in sight, Dr. Rowell warns.

Chemical Mixture Helps Remove Tree Stumps

Tree stumps have plagued farmers and home owners since land was first tilled or landscaped.

Now scientists have come up with a partial answer to the problem. Carl J. Holcomb, forester for the VPI Agricultural Extension Service, says that a combination of chemicals applied to the stump will make it easier to burn out.

In tests conducted by the University of Illinois, about 80% of the stump was destroyed when it was treated with the chemical mixture, while only 30% was destroyed when no chemical was used.

Holcomb says he believes the simplest, quickest and cheapest way to get rid of one or two stumps in a yard usually is to dig them out. However, not many people relish the job. The chemical method is probably next best.

County agents in Virginia can supply detailed information on burning tree stumps with the chemical mixture.
